Want to do something useful with your computer? Try a useful yet artistic software: Cute Print Flowers! The program allows you to print any image you like to your own Windows printer, either as a fully rendered picture or as a postcard. You can choose to print a picture straight from its file, from an online photo gallery or from a folder of your choice. You can also generate a postcard from an image, convert it to an GIF and print it as a JPG image. You can even combine two or more images into one! It's always good to know which are your most used programs, so that you can tweak them or make some more efficient. In that case, How to Clean Up, Save Space & Boost Your PC is the right program for you, since it scans your machine and tries to find out which programs are eating your RAM and other resources. In the end, you will get a list of programs that can be removed or upgraded to take advantage of the resources you have available. The best part is that it's free. Don't forget to pay attention to the news, because more and more free programs are being released every day. Download and try them out! You'll be surprised by what you'll find.

Q: ASP.NET MVC: Possible to pass dropdownlist data directly to ViewModel? When I receive data from a controller to the view, I have to create an object which contains the received data and use this object in the view. It would be nice to receive data directly from a dropdownlist in my view, since I want to be able to edit other values in the form depending on what the data in the dropdownlist was set to. In my case, I'd want to do something like: ViewModel public class CreatePierViewModel { public string Task { get; set; } public int Site { get; set; } public SelectList Pier { get; set; } public CreatePierViewModel(string task, int site, IEnumerable pier) { Task = task; Site = site; Pier = new SelectList(pier); } } Controller public ActionResult CreatePier() { ViewModel vm = new ViewModel(); vm.Task = "Something"; vm.Site = 1; return View(vm); } CreatePier.cshtml @model CreatePierViewModel @using (Html.BeginForm()) {
