Right now I'm using the thin gem, and it takes ages to run all the RSpec tests because of the amount of requests that are made. Is there a way that the

RSpec tests can be run in parallel with the web requests, so that they can be run all at once? A: You can use a gem named rspec-parallel. It will handle this for you. gem 'rspec-parallel', require: 'rspec/parallel' RSpec.configure do |config| config.parallel_mode = :fork end It does not require the rack-test gem. how to get a cracked version. Click on the "Browse" button on the top-left side of the program window and then click on "Next" to find the location of the registration code or serial number. Double-click on the registration code or serial number. Confirm the product key in the window that opens and follow the instructions in order to register the software and get a full registered version. Uninstall the existing version of the program before you install the new version. You can do this by downloading the removal tool from the official website of the program or by removing the program folder from the C Drive (if the program is installed in it). Use the updated versions of the program if you want to use the latest updates and do not want to crack the license code. If you do not have a cracked version, you can get it from a reliable source. In this case, your current version will be disabled and you will be prompted to download the registration code or serial number. Use the cracked version after you disable the old version. Note: The steps above are only a basic guide. For a complete and detailed guide, please refer to the manual in the "Manual" folder that comes with the cracked version. If you want to remove the application and reset the counter to 0, go to the "Settings" tab on the main window of the program and click on "Reset". If you want to erase the current version of the program from your computer, go to the "Settings" tab on the main window of the program and click on "Erase", then remove the current folder on your computer.
